EXPLORE ANIMAL HABITATS

In the zone

The deeper in the ocean you go, the less sunlight there is. Some animals always live in one zone, while others travel between zones to hunt and feed.

Great white pelican

0-600 feet THE SUNLIGHT ZONE

The sunlight zone teems with life. This is where almost all sea creatures live, including many sharks and smaller fish, mammals, turtles, and sea birds. Plants and plankton live here, too.

Green sea turtle

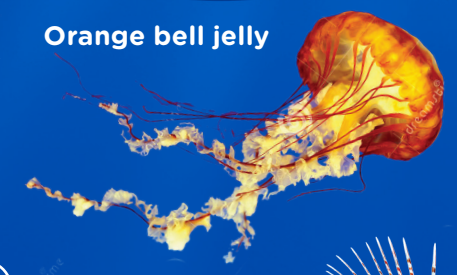

Pearly razorfish

Bigeye tuna

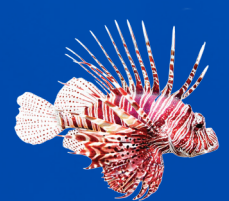

Dolphin

Orange bell jelly

A copepod is a tiny crustacean that drifts near the surface, eating algae and mini plants.

Lionfish

600-3,300 feet THE TWILIGHT ZONE

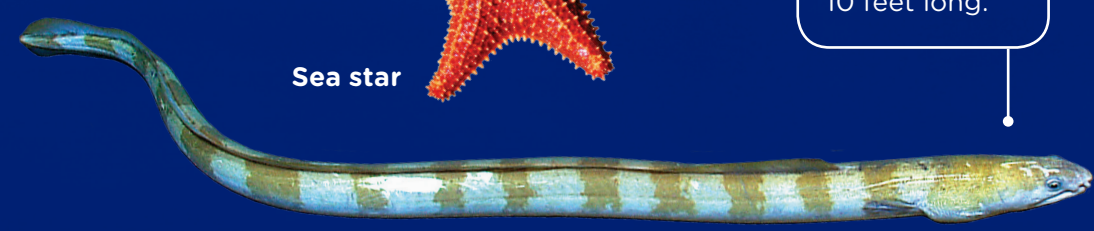

Most of the creatures that live on the seafloor are found in the twilight zone. Only filtered sunlight reaches here, so the light is dim. Many animals in this zone have big eyes or glow in the dark.

Squid

Sea star

Eels range from 2 inches to 13 feet long. This one is 10 feet long.

Angel shark

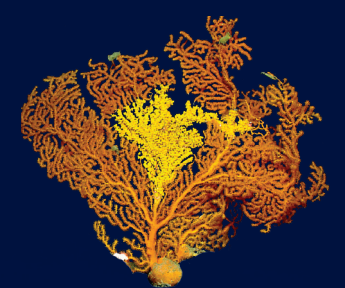

Short bigeye fish

Greeneye fish

3,300-13,000 feet THE MIDNIGHT ZONE

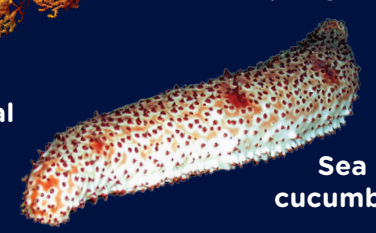

The midnight zone is pitch black and cold. Animals here have special ways of finding food in the dark. The deepest part of this zone is called the abyss.

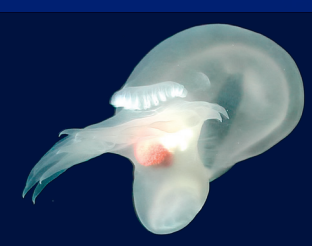

Fan coral

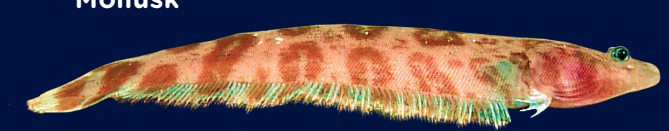

Glass sponge

Sea cucumber

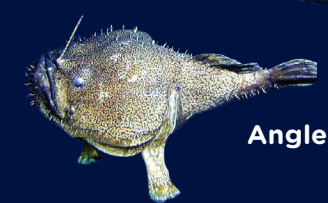

Mollusk

Flatfish

The Greenland shark has glow-in-the-dark eyes, thanks to a parasite that latches on and gives off light. The light attracts prey.

COOL ANIMAL FACTS

The stackup

TALENT: BOLDNESS
The chinstrap penguin builds its nest out of rocks. There are never quite enough small rocks to go around, so frequent battles over rocks occur among these bold penguins.

chinstrap penguin

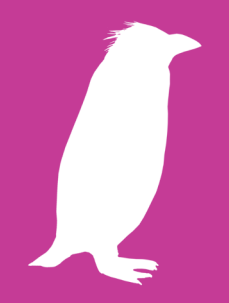

Up to 27 inches tall and 12 pounds

TALENT: LIVING LARGE
Macaroni penguins live in large colonies, or groups. There can be 2 million or more macaronis in one place. Their name comes from an old phrase that means "very fancy."

macaroni penguin

Up to 28 inches tall and 12 pounds

TALENT: POSING
The Adélie penguin is noisy and social. It communicates through loud calls, displays, and posturing or posing.

adélie penguin

Up to 28 inches tall and 12 pounds

TALENT: SPEEDSTER
The gentoo's little white cap, rounded tummy, and peach-colored feet are adorable. It's also the fastest penguin swimmer, clocking in at 22 miles per hour.

gentoo penguin

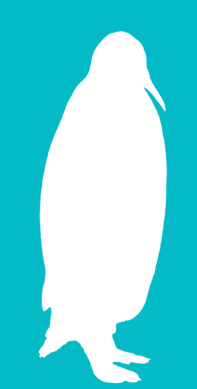

Up to 30 inches tall and 13 pounds

TALENT: LOOKING ROYAL
The king penguin looks a lot like its emperor cousin, only it's number two in size. Like the emperor, it hatches one chick at a time. The little one has fuzzy brown feathers until it's one year old.

king penguin

Up to 3 feet tall and 35 pounds

TALENT: GREAT DAD
The emperor penguin is famous for its heroic march to breeding grounds and for its long, cold wait for its single egg to hatch. The chick hatches in the harsh winter on its dad's feet.
